CONDITION: Folio, three-quarters green crushed levant morocco, gilt back, red edges, uncut. The Harrison Post copy with bookplate. Size of leaf, 10 $\frac{7}{8}$ by 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches.

FIRST EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); Dedication, A2; Text, B1-[Z4], Aa1-[Zz4], and Aaa1-[Iii4], pp. 1-432; "Annotations and Coniectures," a1-[d4], without pagination; "The Chronologie to Ammianus Marcellinus," A1-[F2] (verso blank), in fours, without pagination.

At the beginning of the dedication, the text, and throughout the text, are ornamental head-pieces and ornamental initial letters. At the end of the text is a large ornamental tail-piece.

Signature Eiii is numbered. In the Chronologie sig. Dii is printed D2.

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: Page 113 is misprinted 115; 115 is 105; 118 is 112; 160 is 158.

The following errors occur in the catchwords: On Ii_i (verso), "feare" is followed by "yet" on Ii_{ii} (recto); on Ddd_{iv} (verso), "ted" is followed by "course" on Ccc_i (recto); on Iii_{iv} (recto), "maundement" is followed by "mandement" on Iii_{iv} (verso).

This and other translations made by Holland have been highly commended as being both faithful and readable. Fuller designated him "the translator generall in his age."

CONDITION: Folio, contemporary calf, sprinkled edges. The John Gurdon Rebow copy with bookplate. Size of leaf, 11 $\frac{1}{4}$ by 7 $\frac{3}{8}$ inches.

FIRST EDITION, second issue.

COLLATION: Preliminary blank leaf, [A1]; Title as above, within an elaborate woodcut border (verso blank); Dedication to the Prince of Wales, signed "Francis St. Alban," one leaf; Text, B1-[Z4] and Aa1-[Ii4], ending with errata, in fours, pp. 1-248.

In this copy the engraved portrait is between the title-page and dedi-

At the beginning of the text and the dedication are ornamental head-pieces and ornamental initial letters.

This is assumed to be the second issue of the first edition owing to the fact that though it contains at the end the "faults escaped," yet three of these seven errors have been corrected.

This is the only historical work of any size by Bacon, and was written after his downfall. James Spedding, the editor of Bacon's works, says:
"Though not one of his works which stands highest, either in reputation or popularity, with later times, 'Henry the Seventh' has done its work more effectually perhaps than any one of them. None of the histories which had been written before conveyed any idea either of the distinctive character of the man or the real business of his reign. Every history which has been written since has derived all its light from this, and followed its guidance in every question of importance."

BANKS, JOHN (fl. 1696).

The || Unhappy Favourite: || Or The || Earl of Essex. || A || Tragedy. || Acted at the || Theatre Royal || By their Majesty's Servants. || Written by John Bankes. || [Four lines in Latin from Juvenal.] || London, || Printed for Richard Bentley and Mary Magnes in Ruffel-street || near the Piazza in Covent-Garden, 1682.

CONDITION: 4°, gray wrappers. Size of leaf, 8 3/8 by 6 1/4 inches.

FIRST EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); Dedication, A2-[A3] (verso "Persons Represented"); "Prologue," [A4] (verso "Prologue, By Mr. Dryden"); Text, B1-L1 (verso "Epilogue, By Mr. Dryden"), in fours, pp. 1-[78]; "Prologue," [L2] (verso advertisement), one leaf without pagination.

ERROR IN SIGNATURE: D1 is misprinted C1.

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: Pages 65 to 68 are omitted; p. 77 is misprinted 73.

On G3 (verso), the catchword "Pitties" is followed by "Pitty's" on G4 (recto).

The running head-lines read: "The Unhappy Favourite, || Or, the Earl of Essex," from pp. 2-15; "The Vnhappy Favourite, || The Earl of Effex," on pp. 16-17; "The Unhappy Favourite; or, || The Earl of Effex," for the remainder of the volume.

The Prologue and Epilogue were written by John Dryden.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

Although this play is indifferently written, yet it became very popular, mostly through the splendid acting of Mrs. Berry who played the part of Queen Elizabeth, to which she gave better light upon the character of this queen than history records.

BANKS, JOHN.

Vertue Betray'd: || Or, || Anna Bullen. || A || Tragedy. || Acted at His || Royal Highness || The || Duke's Theatre. || Written by John Banks. || Crescit sub Pondere Virtus. || London: || Printed for R. Bentley and M. Magnes, in Ruffel-Street || in Covent-Garden. MDCLXXXII.

CONDITION: 4°, three-quarters brown morocco, sprinkled edges. The Bridgewater copy with bookplate. Size of leaf, 8 $\frac{1}{8}$ by 6 $\frac{1}{5}$ inches.

FIRST EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); Dedication to the Duchess of Somerset, A2-[A3]; Prologue, [A4] (verso "Persons Represented"); Text, B1-[L4] (verso "Epilogue"), in fours, pp. 1-[80].

There is no catchword on E3 (recto).

This play is dedicated to Elizabeth, Duchess of Somerset, and in the dedication is an interesting reference to Shakespeare. Betterton appears as one of the actors in the "Persons Represented." The subject of the play is based on the story of King Henry VIII and Anne Boleyn.

The Prologue and the Epilogue are preserved on a broadside of which a copy is in the Chetham Library.

This was the most successful of all the plays of John Banks, and it held the boards until 1766.

FIRST EDITION.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); Dedication to Prince Henry Fitz-Roy, A2-[A3] (recto); "Prologue," [A3] (verso)-[A4] (verso "The Actors Names"); Text, B1-[H4], in fours, pp. 1-56; "Epilogue," one leaf without pagination. Sig. G2 is misprinted F2.

The running head-line, "The Round-heads; Or, The Good Old Cause," reads "The Round-heads, Or the Good Old Cause" on B1 (verso); and reads "The Round-heads; Or the Good Old Cause" on the verso of C1, D1, E1, F3, G2, and H3.

On A4 (recto), the catchword "Lord" is followed by "The" on A4 (verso); on C1 (recto), "Lam." is followed by "Duc." on C1 (verso). There is no catchword on H4 (verso).

At the beginning of the dedication is an ornamental head-piece.

Mrs. Behn borrowed a large part of the plot and the language of this play from the "Rump," by John Tatham, in which the Puritans are painted in contemptible colors.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

On G₄(verso), the catchword "The" is followed by "Act" on H₁(recto). On the verso of the title is the book-stamp of the Duke of Roxburgh. This play, which has been attributed to Betterton, is an alteration of John Marston's "The Dutch Courtezan," according to Halliwell, but as Leslie Stephen and Sidney Lee, in the "Dictionary of National Biography," say, it is an alteration of Marston's "The Malcontent."

BLACKMORE, RICHARD (1650?-1729).

Prince Arthur. || An Heroick || Poem. || In Ten Books. || By Richard Blackmore, M. D. || And || Fellow of the College of Physicians in London. || The Third Edition Corrected. || To which is added, An Index, Explaining the Names || of Countries, Cities, and Rivers, &c. || London: || Printed for Awnsham and John Churchill at the black Swan in || Pater-Noster-Row, MDC-XCVI.

CONDITION: Folio, contemporary calf, sprinkled edges. Size of leaf, 12 1/8 by 7 1/2 inches.

THIRD EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, within double ruled border, one leaf (verso blank); "The Preface," one leaf, A₁-[A₂] and a₁-[c₂] (recto); Advertisements, [c₂] (recto and verso); Text, B₁-[Z₄] and Aa₁-[Pp₄], ending with errata, in fours, pp. 1-296; Index, *₁-[*₂], two leaves without pagination.

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: Page 35 is misprinted 55; 38 is 58.

Pages 34, 216, and 270 are blank.

The following errors occur in the catchwords: On Gg₁(verso), "Lope" is followed by "Lopt" on Gg₂(recto); on Gg₄(verso), "Ludvallo" is followed by "Ludvalla" on Hh₁(recto); on Ll₄(verso), "We" is followed by "Withall" on Mm₁(recto).

On p. 210 the running head-line reads "Book II," instead of "Book VII."

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

In the preface of "Prince Arthur," Blackmore has said that his purpose was to produce some form of entertainment which would awaken the interest and stimulate the imagination of the young, and replace the vicious comedies of the times.

In its original form the poem was in ten books, and in two years it passed through three editions. As an appreciation of its success he added two more books. Blackmore was knighted in 1697, and it is more than probable that this distinction was attained as a reward for his work. In this as well as in his "Satire against Wit," he severely assailed Dryden for the immoral character of many of his plays. Dryden retaliated in his prologue to "The Pilgrim," by alluding most contemptuously to Blackmore.

This particular copy is interesting for the marginal notes in the handwriting of some unknown person, showing how the author had plagiarized to an unwarranted extent from Virgil's "Aeneid," and from other authors.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: In "Characters And Censures," p. 63 is misprinted 93; 70 is 86; 71 is 87.

The following errors occur in the catchwords: On D₃ (verso) there is no catchword; on N₂ (recto), "other" is followed by "ther" on N₂ (verso); Second Part: On D₄ (recto), "fiderable" is followed by "derable" on D₄ (verso).

In the first part of this work the author treats on poetry in general, on its different varieties, and on English, French, Italian, and Spanish poetry, in connection with the characteristics of the several languages. The second part gives an account of sixty-seven poets of various ages and countries. Blount was a universal scholar of a strong skeptical spirit, a freedom from conventionality, and with a comfortable cynicism. He heartily despised mere learning. "There is not," he says, "a simpler animal and a more superfluous member of the state, than a mere scholar."

The following errors occur in the catchwords: On H₄ (recto), "you" is followed by "Sir Rob" on H₄ (verso); on K₄ (verso), "Mr. Wil." is followed by "M. Wy." on L₁ (recto).

At the beginning of the text is an ornamental head-piece and the text commences with an ornamental initial letter.

Although Baker, Kirkman, and Halliwell have identified T. B. as Anthony Brewer, there seems to be but slight grounds for the suggestion. The third act especially resembles the diction and versification of Massinger. Some attribute the play to the author of "The Merry Devil of Edmonton," which, according to Kirkman, is by Shakespeare. John Leaner, whom Langbaine calls a "confident plagiarist," appropriated the play as his own in 1677, and reprinted it under the title of "Country Innocence."

Inserted is a portrait of Dryden. This is a proof before letters by Grateloup, the younger, and in a peculiar method of engraving, the secret of which he alone had. This method had been passed on to his nephew, and upon the death of the latter the process was lost. All efforts made for its rediscovery have been unsuccessful. Grateloup engraved portraits of several eminent Frenchmen, but John Dryden was the only Englishman to receive his attention.

In this collection is an elegy by Dryden signed "Alumnus," written when he was a boy at Westminster School. Among the other contributors were Earls Westmoreland and Falkland, Sir Aston Cokain, Charles Cotton, Robert Herrick, Sir John Denham, Andrew Marvell, Alexander Brome, and Richard Brome, who was the editor.

The frontispiece is etched by F. Clein, and underneath are six lines in Latin by Mountagu. At the beginning of the text is a large ornamental head-piece, and between the contributions are small ornamental head-pieces.

THIRD EDITION.

Booke," signed "A. B.," [A6]; "Errata," [A7] (verso blank); Blank leaf, [A8]; "To the Reader," signed "Thomas Brovvne," A1-A2; Text, A3-[M7] (verso blank), in eights, pp. 1-[184].

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: Pages 171 and 172 are repeated.

There are ornamental head-pieces on A2, A4, A6, A7, A1 (repeated) and I4 (verso). On A7 the head-piece is repeated below the text. There are ornamental initial letters on A4, A6, and A1 (repeated).

This, it is stated, is the first authorized edition. In his preface the author deplores the fact that two editions had already been surreptitiously issued. He had entrusted his manuscript to one and it was shared by many, until by transcription it had become "successively corrupted until it arrived in a most depraved copy at the presse." Andrew Crooke, the printer of this edition, had also issued the two spurious editions of 1642. The engraved title-page appears in each of the three issues, but in this edition the words "Religio Medici," and the inscription at the foot, including the engraver's name, have been erased, and the above inscription has been substituted.

In this edition the treatise has many additions and revisions made by the author. Johnson says that Browne permitted the spurious editions of earlier date, that he might test the appreciation of the public.

A bibliography of "Religio Medici" has been compiled by Dr. Greenhill in which he has enumerated forty-three editions from 1642 to 1881. It was also translated into many languages.

The puritanical outburst of William Prynne in 1642 against the corrupting influence of the drama, flamed forth again with unabated vigor in 1698; this time by Jeremy Collier, eminent Anglican priest and non-juror.

Towards the end of the seventeenth century, having begun with mild lapses from virtue, the drama in its immorality had gradually reached the depths of degraded coarseness. Unless grossly indecent, few plays survived, some being still-born, and others perishing from lack of support. Many of these plays were so vicious indeed, that ladies who desired to witness them, preferred to mask their own features before hearing and viewing the coarser features of the stage.

In his “Short View,” Collier attacked writers of the drama—English and others, fearlessly and without compromise. Dryden and Congreve, master dramatists of the day, received equal attention and unsparing censure with D’Urfey and Vanbrugh, who openly traded in coarseness. He compared the perverted mode of the drama of the period with the purer plays of the Greeks and Romans. He attacked the dramatists for their profaneness and abuse of the clergy. He pointed out the encouragement given to immorality by the looseness of the plots, and the glaring indiscretions in the lines of the contemporary dramas.

His work produced somewhat of a sensation and went through several editions in two years. It was speedily answered by Dryden, Congreve, Dennis, Drake, Vanbrugh, and others, and a spirited controversy followed in which it must be said Collier was victor.

It has been urged that Collier erred in some of his premises, and doubtless he did. He assumed that the immorality of society was due to the corrupting influence of the stage, which was true but in part. In his zeal he read into lines, ulterior allusions that had no existence. He also brought upon himself unconscious ridicule, for being no stylist, he undertook to criticize the literary style of those whom he arraigned. But his logic if rude was vigorous and forceful, and under it Dryden, Con-grave, and the others went down to acknowledged defeat. Popular opinion and public taste had undergone a complete change, and there was witnessed the advent of a new and purer mode of the drama—one which long obtained.

ERROR IN PAGINATION: Page 61 is misprinted 71.

On Ii1 (recto), the catchword "Than" is followed by "Then" on Ii1 (verso).

The frontispiece is a portrait of Howard, by Kneller, engraved by White. This work was formed by the addition of "The Duke of Lerma" to his "Four New Plays," originally published in 1665. "The Committee" had as a second title "The Faithful Irishman," in which the puritan party then in power was ridiculed. "The Indian Queen" was the work of Howard and Dryden, and the music was by Purcell. The scene of "The Vestal Virgin" is laid in Rome. It has the unusual feature of having two fifth acts, one terminating in tragedy, and the other ending in comedy.

CONDITION: 4°, white paper wrappers, stitched, sprinkled edges. Size of leaf, 8 by 6 inches. Some head-lines are closely trimmed.

FIRST EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, one leaf (verso blank); "To the Reader," one unnumbered leaf and a1; "Prologue," [a2]; "The Persons Names," [a3] (verso) (recto blank); Text, B1-[K2], in fours, pp. 1-68; "Epilogue," [K3] (verso blank), pp. [69]-[70].

At the beginning of the text is an ornamental head-piece.

On D4 (recto), the catchword "more" is followed by "More" on D4 (verso).

The running head-lines "The Great Favourite, or || the Duke of Lerma," in many instances read "The Great Favourite; Or, || The Duke of Lerma."

This is written both in blank verse and rhyme, and is Howard's most interesting tragedy. In his preface Howard answers Dryden's essay "Of Dramatick Poesie," to which Dryden replied in the second edition of "The Indian Emperour," with "A Defence of an Essay of Dramatic Poesie."

Howard was severely criticized by Dryden, Shadwell, Villiers, and others, and as equally praised by Langbaine and Gildon. Despite adverse criticism Howard was not without genius, and the adverse comments of some of his contemporaries may have been accentuated by his haughty bearing, his vanity, and self-esteem.

The portrait frontispiece is a brilliant impression of the mezzotint by Beckett, of the original painting of herself, by Mrs. Anne Killigrew. Anne Killigrew, an accomplished poet and artist died at the early age of twenty-four. This volume appeared during the following year, and it contains an ode by Dryden, in praise of her rare genius in verse and in art. Anthony Wood says of her, that "there is nothing spoken of her, which she was not equal to, if not superior." Johnson considered Dryden's ode the noblest in the English language.

ERRORS IN SIGNATURES: Sig. F4 is unnumbered; Oo4 is unnumbered.

The present is the best known of Langbaine’s works on the English stage. It is valuable for reference but is lacking in many bibliographical details. Langbaine’s strong argument was that in the plays of the time, most of the plots were borrowed, and thereby drew upon himself severe criticism. He had little regard for the genius of Dryden, whom he accused of being responsible for the title-page of the pirated edition of his “Momus Triumphans.”

In 1699, Charles Gildon issued a revised edition of the volume, entitled “The Lives and Characters of the English Dramatick Poets. First begun by Mr. Langbaine, and continued down to this time by a careful Hand.”

To an edition of 1691, William Oldys added copious manuscript notes and emendations, with contemporary gossip, many of which were used by Cibber in his “Lives of the Poets,” 1753.

Disraeli states that Langbaine “read poetry only to detect plagiarisms.”

Father Paul, otherwise known as Sarpi, was born in Venice in 1552. It is claimed for him that he anticipated Harvey in discovering the circulation of the blood, and he was the forerunner of noted discoveries in magnetism. He first made known the valves of the veins and also the most beautiful function of the iris—its contractility,—and various surmises of his regarding heat, light, and sound have since been wrought into scientific truths. He was one of the first to arrive at the conclusion that the aim of punishment should be reformation and not vengeance.

In this play there are many fine lines and a wealth of incidents. Dryden, who wrote the prologue, gracefully compliments the author upon his happy observance of chronological and dramatic properties, which at that period were much disregarded. The play when presented met with considerable success. In his preface, the author makes acknowledgment of a gift received from the Princess Royal, afterwards Queen Anne. An answer to the "Discourse" will be found in Bossuet's "Maxims," 1699.

The date on the title-page is evidently an error. According to the "Dictionary of National Biography," the poem first appeared in 1698.

Oldmixon commenced writing in 1696, and during the ten succeeding years produced poetry, translations, and several plays. In 1708, he renounced his muse, and thereafter devoted his time to the writing of history and political pamphlets. Gay, in "The Present State of Wit," 1711, spoke of him as a man of good sense, but "for the most, perfectly a stranger to fine writing."

"Titus and Berenice" is a translation with a few alterations of a play of the same title by Racine; and in the "Cheats of Scapin," Otway has done little more than to translate Molière's "Fourberies de Scapin," the plot of which, moreover, is borrowed from the "Phormio" of Terence.

Phillips was a voluminous writer, and in character somewhat loose and unscrupulous. He was for a time associated with Titus Oates of unsavory memory. He left many writings in prose, poetry, and translations, among which latter were those from Greek, Latin, and French. He was a writer of much ability, but his chiefest vein lay in burlesque and facetious poetry.

In 1692, Namur had been taken by the French, and Boileau in a poem had attempted to exalt the greatness of Louis XIV, in exaggerated verses. Namur was retaken in 1695 by William, and Prior reprinted Boileau's "Ode" with a paraphrase of his own parallel to each stanza. The burlesque was both clever and happy, and the classical allusions of the French poet have been adroitly converted into compliments for the English king.

Thomas Rogers left but little literary work, and that was principally coarse and satirical. One commentator has described his tirades as "wearisome and bigoted."

ERROR IN PAGINATION: Page 55 is misprinted 56.

On A3 (recto), the catchword "Tamerlane" is followed by "A" on A3 (verso).

By contemporary writers, this was esteemed a good play, and Saunders was very young when he wrote it. A prologue was written by Dryden, whose attitude must have been somewhat unusual for in it he says "he's the first boy-poet of our age." The play was based upon an old novel titled "Tamerlane and Asteria."

SIXTH OR SEVENTH EDITION, with the five-line imprint.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); "To the Reader," [A2] (verso "The Persons Represented"); Text, B1-[M4], in fours, pp. [1]-88.

ERRORS IN SIGNATURES: Sig. C3, D3, and F3 are unnumbered.

Errors in catchwords: The catchword on A2 is lacking; on C2 (recto), "I'll" is followed by "I'le" on C2 (verso); on C4 (recto), "(Since" is followed by "(Since" on C4 (verso); on G2 (verso), "Neptunes" is followed by "Neptune's" on G3 (recto). In this copy the catchword on F1 (recto) reads "Pol." In the copy described in Bartlett and Pollard, "A Census of Shakespeare's Plays in Quarto" (1916), the catch-word on F1 is "Pol. My."

The running head-line on p. 88 reads: "The Tragedy of &c."

There were two editions issued in 1676; one with a four-line imprint and another with an imprint of five lines.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

The two editions of this date are reset throughout, but with many of the same mistakes; Miss Henrietta Bartlett and Mr. Pollard have been unable to determine which is the earlier. Both variations are in the British Museum.

This is the only copy of the five-line imprint known in a private library, there being but five other additional copies known.

The story of Hamlet is an old one and first appears in Saxo Grammaticus' chronicles about 1200, and was popular on the English stage as early as 1589, in a play now lost sight of, perhaps by Thomas Kyd. It was performed at Newington Theatre in 1594, and is often referred to by contemporaneous writers.

Shakespeare's play owed much to this earlier play. It was written, according to Furness in 1600, but Lee puts the date as of 1602.

ERROR IN SIGNATURE: Sig. D₃ is unnumbered.

The following errors occur in the catchwords: On A₂ (recto), "Byfh." is followed by "Bifh." on A₂ (verso); on D₃ (verso), "Pist." is followed by "Pist." on D₄ (recto); on E₃ (verso), "Folow" is followed by "Follow" on E₄ (recto); on F₃ (recto), "And" is followed by "As" on F₃ (verso).

The running head-lines on the versi of B₃, B₄, and D₄ read "The Chrouicle History," instead of "The Chronicle History."

There is a small conventional head-piece at the beginning of the text, and at the end is a large conventional tail-piece.

This copy is one of the falsely dated quartos which were really issued in 1619, despite the fact that the date 1608 appears on the title-page. There were nine quartos issued, some of which were by Shakespeare entirely, some partially, and some not at all by him: but all were issued from the press of William Jaggard for Thomas Pavier in 1619. Five have false dates on the title, and four have the name of the publisher wrongly stated. This entire question has been discussed at length by A. W. Pollard in his "Shakespeare's Folios and Quartos" (1909), and his conclusions are now generally accepted. For the First Folio (1623), the play was either set from an unknown version, or entirely recast, so great is the difference between that and the earlier imprint.

Halliwell says that this is an imperfect copy of the play which was first printed in its entirety in the folio of 1623.

Of the first edition (1608), but five perfect copies are known, and of the second edition but two perfect copies are recorded. All of these are in public institutions.

"Cozen" on A₃ (verso); on A₄ (verso), "Poy" is followed by "Poi" on B₁ (recto); sig. D₄ (recto) has no catchword.

This is a line-for-line reprint of the 1632 quarto edition.

Shakespeare, in writing "Henry IV," drew for the plot of his play on "The Chronicles" of Holinshed (1577) and from a valueless but, at the time, very popular anonymous play termed "The Famous Victories of Henry V," which was successfully acted between 1588 and 1595, but was not published until 1598.

At the beginning of the text, and on the verso of G4, before the title "To the Gentlemen Readers," are ornamental head-pieces.

On the title-page is the autographic signature of George Steevens, the well-known Shakespearean editor, to whom this copy formerly belonged.

The first edition of this play was printed anonymously in 1591, but it is generally attributed to Christopher Marlowe, although Lee says, upon very small grounds. In Justin Winsor's "Bibliography of Shakespeare" (1876), p. 40, will be found an interesting note collating the authorities on the authorship of this play. The only known copy of the first edition is in the Capell collection. Of the second edition three copies only are known to be in private collections; the other existing copies are in public libraries and museums.

This play was the one from which Shakespeare drew his "King John," which though written probably in 1594, first appeared in the First Folio of 1623. Shakespeare took from this source book its plot, but modified it somewhat; also he adopted most of the characters, the scenes, and even some of the lines.

The power of Shakespeare's name when once he had become famous, stimulated the monetary avidity of unscrupulous publishers. They placed his initials or his name on plays with which he had nothing to do as author. This is an example of this meretricious practice. On the title-page Shakespeare's initials only are used; in the third edition printed in 1622, his full name appears.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

Errors in catchwords: On F₂ (recto), "3 Le" is followed by "3 Let" on F₂ (verso); on F₃ (verso), "2. O" is followed by "1. O" on F₄ (recto). "This was the first play by Shakespeare founded on Sir Thomas North's translation of Plutarch's Lives, which appeared in 1579 and was reprinted in 1595. Shakespeare used portions of the lives of Caesar, Anthony and Brutus and followed Plutarch very closely. John Weever, in his Mirror of Martyrs, 1601, refers to Brutus' speech over the body of Caesar and it is supposed that Shakespeare's play was written in 1599 or 1600."

"It first appeared in the First Folio, 1623, and was not printed separately until 1684 when it appeared in quarto form and was followed by four undated editions before the dated edition of 1691. The reason for six editions in seven years must be sought in the great popularity which the play had on account of the excellent acting of Thomas Betterton and in general interest in the great tragedies which brought out six editions of Hamlet and four of Othello between 1676 and 1709." Bartlett, "Mr. William Shakespeare" (1922).

In 1741, "Julius Caesar" was translated into German, the first translation of Shakespeare into any language.

Voltaire visited England in 1726 and had an opportunity to hear "Julius Caesar." The play appealed to him with such force that he wrote "Brutus," and later "La Mort de César."

According to the latest authorities this is considered the first quarto edition. Heretofore the undated editions were supposed to have been issued prior to 1684, generally the date 1680 being given as the first edition. Now the undated editions are thought to have been issued between the 1684 and the 1691 editions.

Betterton's name appears among the "Dramatis Personæ" as Brutus.

SECOND EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); Text, A2-K2 (verso blank), in fours. No pagination.

ERROR IN SIGNATURE: Sig. H3 is misprinted H2.

Error in catchword: On E4 (verso), "foote" is followed by "foot" on F1 (recto).

The running head-line, "Loues Labour's loft," reads "Loues Labour's lost" on the versis of C1, D1, E1, F2, G4, H1, I2, and K1.

The bottom of leaf sig. E1 is slightly torn, affecting only the signature mark. On sig. I2 (verso), the catchword has been cut off.

The text begins with an ornamental head-piece and an ornamental initial letter.

The plot of this play is from no known source, but is replete with allusions of a contemporary nature, mostly on French affairs, which, as they were topical, made the play very popular at the time; but these allusions are not now so interesting.

This is supposed to be Shakespeare's first complete play. Although it was not published until 1598, it was, in all probability, written about the year 1591. On the title-page of the first edition is stated the fact that it was "Newly corrected and augmented," which would imply that an earlier edition existed, but if such there were, it is unknown to bibliographers; Shakespeare's name on the title herein appears for the first time as the author of a play.

On sig. D2 (verso), the catchword "Amongft" is followed by "Amogft" on D3 (recto); on F2 (verso), "Hoft." is followed by "Host-" on F3 (recto).

This play was produced on the stage in or perhaps before 1604. It was attributed to Shakespeare, but upon what foundation is not known. It is also ascribed to Drayton, to Heywood, to Wilkins, and to Anthony Brewer. It is probable that the latter was really the author, as the play was entered on the Stationers Register, Oct. 22, 1607, as by "T. B." [Tony Brewer], and was first published anonymously in 1608. Not until 1653 was it assigned to Shakespeare and then by a bookseller, Humphrey Moseley. All authorities agree that there is no trace of Shakespeare's workmanship in the comedy.

This edition is a reprint, with slight changes, of the fourth edition printed in 1626.

FIRST EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); "The Prologue," A2 (verso blank); Text, A3-[K4], in fours. No pagination.

Signature I2 is in Italics.

On C2 (verso), "harp." is followed by "Harp." on C3 (recto); on C3 (recto), "harp." is followed by "Harp." on C3 (verso); on E1 (verso), "where" is followed by "Where" on E2 (recto); on F4 (verso), "with" is followed by "With" on G1 (recto).

The following variations appear in the running head-lines: "The first part of," instead of "The first part of," is found on verso of A4, B2, B3, C2, C3, D1, D2, D4, E3, F1, F4, G1, G4, H2, H3, I2, I4, K1, and K3; "fir John Old-castle" appears, instead of "fir Iohn Old-castle," on the recto of B2, B4, C2, C4, D1, D3, E2, E4, F1, F3, G1, G3, H1, H3, I1, I3, K2, and K4.

There is an ornamental head-piece before the prologue and before the text, and the prologue and text both begin with an ornamental initial letter.

This play first appeared anonymously in 1600, but it is now agreed by the best authorities that it was the joint work of Antony Munday, Robert Wilson, Michael Drayton, and Richard Hathaway. It does not bear Shakespeare's name nor his initials on the title-page. When Pavier issued his falsely dated edition in 1619, he ascribed it to Shakespeare and that poet's name appears on the title-page. (See William Andrews Clark, Jr., "Early English Literature" (1920), Vol. I, p. 109.)

Chetwinde included this play, which has little merit, with five other spurious ones, together with "Pericles" in the Third Folio; his text, however, follows that of the 1619 edition, which is not so good as that of the 1600.

There are recorded only five copies of this edition of 1600, respectively: The British Museum, the Bodleian Library, the Henry E. Huntington Library, the H. C. Folger collection, and the present one.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

The second part of the play, which was licensed October 11, 1600, has been lost sight of and no copy of it is known to exist; it is supposed to have completed the story, including Oldcastle's martyrdom.

THIRD QUARTO EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); Text, A2-[M4] (verso advertisement of books printed or sold by William Leake), in fours, pp. 1-[94].

At the beginning of the text is an ornamental head-piece.

Errors in catchwords: "Na-," on E3 (recto), is followed by "Ma" on E3 (verso); "Iag.," on E3 (verso), is followed by "Ig." on E4 (recto); there is no catchword on I1 (recto).

Errors in running head-lines: Pages 32 and 40 read: "The Tragedy fo Othello"; pp. 72, 82, and 88 read: "the Moore of Venice," instead of "The Tragedy of Othello"; pp. 77, 83, and 93 read: "The Tragedy of Othello," instead of "the Moore of Venice"; pp. 7, 13, 21, 27, 35, 43, 49, 57, 67, 71, 77, 81, and 87 read: "The Moore of Venice," instead of "the Moore of Venice."

On the fly-leaf is the following inscription: "To Henry Irving as a slight token of friendship and in memory of Feby 14th 1876 from F. A. Marshall July 26th. 1879."

Although the title-page states that this is the fourth edition, it is in reality the third edition in quarto form. The first quarto appeared in 1622, then the play appeared in the folio edition of 1623. The second quarto is dated 1630, and the present volume is a reprint of that edition.

"Othello" was written late in 1603 or early in 1604, and was first acted before James I, in Whitehall, in 1604. The plot is drawn from Giraldi's story of "Un Capitano Moro" or "The Moor of Venice"; it was not known to have been translated into English before Shakespeare dramatized it in the play on which he bestowed the title of "Othello." This play was not printed during Shakespeare's lifetime and was the last to be issued in separate form before the First Folio (1623) was published.

FOURTH EDITION.

COLLATION: Title as above, one leaf (verso blank); Text, R1-[Z4] and Aa1-Bb1 (verso blank), in fours. Blank leaf [Bb2] is lacking. No pagination.

Error in catchword: On sig. Z2 (recto), the catchword "Lyf." is followed by "Li." on Z2 (verso).

At the beginning of the text is an ornamental head-piece.

This edition appeared as the last part of a volume containing "The Whole Contention between the two famous houses," etc., of the same date, with which it has continuous signatures.

It is often found bound separately, as in the copy here described, with the title-page on a single leaf without signature mark.

This play was not included in the First, or Second Folios, but appeared for the first time in folio form in the issue of 1664, with other plays attributed to Shakespeare. It was considered a doubtful play until on the "authority of Farmer, who considered it Shakespeare's earliest performance, it was by Malone readmitted among the genuine plays in 1790, and by Steevens in 1793, and has never since been left out of the complete editions."

There is a great diversity of opinion among the authorities as to the real authorship of the play: Pope and others will not admit it to be Shakespeare's; some have thought it to be entirely an early work of Shakespeare, and such was Malone's opinion at first, but later he and many other authorities, including Steevens, Drake, Collier, and Luce, and also Sidney Lee, believed it to be in part only by Shakespeare. This question is fully discussed by Justin Winsor in his "Bibliography of the Original Quartos and Folios of Shakespeare" (1876), p. 57.

The running head-lines read: "The Taming of the shrew," instead of "The Taming of the Shrew," on A₃ (recto), A₄ (recto), B₂ (recto and verso), C₁ (verso), C₃ (recto), and D₄ (recto).

At the beginning of the text is an ornamental head-piece.

This play first appeared in the folio of 1623, and was for the first time published in quarto form as described above, in 1631.

The play is a revision of one which appeared anonymously in 1594, entitled "A Pleafant Conceited Hiftory, Called The Taming of a Shrew," printed at London by Peter Short. This source play, of which there is only one known copy in existence, that formerly belonging to the Duke of Devonshire, now reposes in the library of Henry E. Huntington.

Malone has attributed this source play to either Peele or Greene. Knight thinks that there may have existed an earlier play upon which this source play and Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" may both have been based. Some authorities, however, seem inclined to believe that Shakespeare had some hand in the writing of the 1594 "Taming of a Shrew," but there seems no evidence to substantiate this.

Shakespeare, in his play, which first appeared in the First Folio, made but little use of this old play, but he did draw therefrom the induction, and therein makes allusions to localities in Warwickshire which give it a decided biographical interest.

Richard Grant White seems to think that in the revision made by Shakespeare of the old play, three hands at least are traceable: that of the author, whoever he might have been; that of Shakespeare himself; and that of some collaborator whom he does not name. He says: "The first appears in the structure of the plot, and in the incidents and dialogue of most of the minor scenes; to the last must be assigned the greater part of the love-business between Bianca and her two suitors; while to Shakspeare belong the clear characterization, the delicious humour, and the rich verbal colouring of the recast Induction, and all the scenes in which Katharine and Petruchio and Grumio are the prominent figures, together with the general effect produced by scattering lines and words and phrases here and there, and removing others elsewhere, throughout the rest of the play." (From introduction to "The Taming of the Shrew" in White's edition of Shakespeare.)

The source play was afterward issued in 1596 and 1607.

At the end of two of the plays on p. 229 of the comedies, and p. 119 of the histories, is a catchword.

The portrait by Droeshout on the title-page is in the third state.

There are ornamental head-pieces and ornamental initial letters at the beginning of the dedication, "To the great variety of Readers," the effigies, the commendatory poems, the names of the actors, "To the memory of my beloved," "On Worthy Master Shakespeare," poem by Hugh Holland, the catalogue, and each of the plays, the epilogue, the prologue, and the actors names on i3 (verso). At the end of many of the plays and "The Actors Names" on i3 (verso) are ornamental tail-pieces.

The Second Folio was reprinted from the First; and while the text is practically identical with it, there are so many variations that it seems probable that an effort was made at editing the work. It has no new readings which are of interest to the scholar. In the opinion of the editor of the edition of the "Cambridge Shakespeare," these emendations according to his observations "deserve no more respect than those of other guessers, except such as is due to their author's familiar acquaintance with the language and customs of the day and possible knowledge of Shakespeare's plays." The sources from which the numerous new readings in this edition were derived, are unknown. Ben Jonson and John Milton have been suggested as those who took part in editing this folio.

It was printed by Thomas Cotes for a number of stationers, and all known copies have the same colophon: "Printed at London by Thomas Cotes, for John Smethwick, William Aspley, Richard Hawkins, Richard Meighen, and Robert Allot, 1632." Following the continental custom, each stationer took a number of copies and had his name alone entered in the imprint; copies of all of the five imprints and of the four varieties of the Allot title-page are described below, making in all eight issues of this folio.

Between 1623 and 1632, several changes took place among the owners of copyrights in the Shakespeare Folio of 1623. For a history of these changes see Pollard, "Shakespeare Folios and Quartos" (1909), pp.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

154-159. This history enables the bibliographer to account for the five names connected with the Second Folio. It is apparent that Allot had the largest number of copies as his imprint appears much more frequently than others. The Meighen and the Aspley imprints are the rarest.

Lowndes states that a copy of the Second Folio exists bearing the date 1631, but this has never been verified. He gives no authority for his assertion, and Bohn in his edition of the "Bibliographer's Manual" (1871), discredits its existence.

Two new preliminary leaves were added to the Second Folio, one containing "Upon the Effigies" and "An Epitaph" (verso blank); and the other "On Worthy Master Shakespeare and his Poems." On the other hand, "The Catalogue" is printed on the verso of the leaf containing the lines by Hugh Holland, hence there are ten preliminary leaves instead of nine.

The numbering of the text-pages is less erratic than in the First Folio, and in two cases, at the end of "Troilus and Cressida" and at the end of "Tymon of Athens," pages blank in the First Folio have been used. Thus there is one leaf less of text, but the total number of leaves in the volume remains 454, the same as in the First Folio.

No definite effort seems to have been made to trace the number of existing copies. They are indeed numerous, but it is believed that the number originally printed was less than one thousand.

The variant copies of this folio are as follows:

(1). a.—|| London, Printed by Tho. Cotes, for Robert Allot, and are to be sold at his shop at the signe || of the blacke Beare in Pauls Churchyard. 1632. ("Coppies" issue.)

b.—|| London, || Printed by Tho. Cotes, for Robert Allot, and are to be sold at his shop at the signe || of the Blacke Beare in Pauls Churchyard. 1632. ("Copies" issue.) [See The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr., "Early English Literature" (1920), Vol. I, pp. 95-98.]

c.—|| London, || Printed by Tho Cotes, for Robert Allot, and are to be sold at his shop at the signe || of the blacke Beare in Pauls [in Italics] Churchyard, 1632. (Bliss copy in the Lenox Library.)

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

This title-page differs from the others in that there is no comma after the word "Histories"; the word "according" reads "accodring"; "Jm-prefſion" reads "Imprefſion"; there is no period after "Tho"; and "Pauls" is in Italics. Pollard says, in his "Shakespeare Folios and Quartos" (1909), that this title-page would appear to be an uncorrected proof of the "Copies" issue of this folio, or perhaps more probably a copy struck off after an accident to the form carelessly repaired and subsequent to the next issue.

COLLATION: Title as above, [A1] (verso blank); "Drammatis Personæ," A2 (verso blank); Text, [A3]-[G4] (verso blank), in fours. No pagination.

Error in catchword: On F2 (recto), "Know" is followed by "Knows" on F2 (verso).

The Restoration bookseller, Francis Kirkman, ascribes the above play to Shakespeare and to Rowley. While it seems quite evident that more than one person had a hand in its writing, yet in no part of the play, either in plot construction, style, or workmanship, can one believe that Shakespeare had any participation. The play was written long before the date on which it was printed, but not before 1622, thereby confirming the authorities who are unanimous in declaring that Shakespeare could have had nothing to do with the work.

As a matter of interest, attention is called to an article written by F. G. Fleay to the "Contributors' Table" of "Shakespeareana," Vol. I, No. VI, April, 1884, p. 173, in which the writer attempts to show that part of this play at least can be attributed to Shakespeare as one of his earliest attempts in writing for the stage.

The story is taken from Geoffrey of Monmouth.

On the verso of the title-page is the book-stamp of the Duke of Roxburgh.

WILD, ROBERT (OR WYLDE) (1609-1679).

Iter Boreale. || With other Select || Poems: || Being || An Exact Collection || of all hitherto Extant. || And some Added: || Never Printed before this Year, 1671. || The Author R. Wild, D. D. || London, || Printed for R. R. and W. C. and are to be sold || in St. Pauls Church-yard, and at || the Exchange, 1671.

CONDITION: 8°, vellum, red label on back, bound with "Rome Rhym'd To Death." The R. Cory, Jr., copy with bookplate. Size of leaf, 5 $\frac{5}{8}$ by 3 $\frac{5}{8}$ inches.

SPURIOUS EDITION.

The Library of William Andrews Clark, Jr.

COLLATION: Preliminary leaf, A 1, pp. [1]-[2], is lacking; Title as above within single rules, [A 2] (verso blank), pp. [3]-[4]; Text, A 3-[H 8], in eights, pp. 5-126.

ERRORS IN PAGINATION: Pages 63 and 64 are repeated.

On E 2 (recto), the catchword "We'l" is followed by "And" on E 2 (verso); on E 5 (recto), "To" is followed by "A" on E 5 (verso); on G 3 (recto), "Some" is followed by "fome" on G 3 (verso); on G 7 (recto), "2. Dr." is followed by "2. Mr." on G 7 (verso); there is no catchword on H 5 (recto).

This unauthorized edition was doubtless issued in response to popular demand. The work first appeared in 1661 and was enormously popular. Dryden has called Wild "the Wither of the city." The success of Wild's work brought forth "many imitations, answers, libels, and vindications."
